Amthal designed and installed a fire alarm and security system for JPA Furniture around working hours to minimise disruption

Contract furniture specialists JPA Furniture has returned to its security roots, looking to Amthal to design, install and maintain a bespoke fire safety solution for the benefit of its staff and visitors.

JPA Furniture initially used Amthal to create a bespoke CCTV system for its head office before requesting the fire and security specialist takeover an existing intruder alarm.

So impressed with the continued attention to customer detail, design, careful installation and ongoing maintenance, the award-winning family firm again called Amthal back to design and install a state of the art fire safety solution.

Amthal worked with JPA Furniture from the initial design process, carrying out a thorough site survey to ensure the resulting fire alarm system would accommodate the company needs, and installation was planned around working hours to minimise disruption.

Complete building fire and security needs

Says Ian Pulsford, Financial Controller at JPA Furniture "Amthal is a company that is a true breath of fresh air in their attentiveness to their customers. They listen to exact requirements and invest in the right research and team to turn the individual needs of a company into a bespoke reality. For both the security and fire safety solutions, installation was completed with the engineers proving to be polite and courteous whilst going out of their way to reduce disruption as much as possible. With Amthal on board, we have total peace of mind our offices are safe and secure and we would have no hesitation in recommending them, and commending their great customer service."

Phil Bryant, Service Accounts Manager at Amthal Fire & Security added "Like JPA Furniture, Amthal has evolved as a family business, with a core mission, vision and set of values in which we consider our customers to be an extension of our team and business. It's something we think sets us apart in a crowded marketplace. With this in mind it's in our core 'DNA' to support bespoke requirements. And we illustrate our dedication to finding the right solutions throughout the process, from the first meeting through design to installation and reliable ongoing maintenance. We believe it's why company's such as JPA Furniture call us back to look after their complete building fire and security needs."
